Abstract: Guido Pfister, Frederick Vogel and J.F. Schoellkopf established the Pfister & Vogel Leather Company in June 1848. Schoellkopf, a cousin of Vogel's and owner of a Buffalo, NY, tannery, provided the finances for the Milwaukee enterprise. The business was so successful that Schoellkopf withdrew from the company in 1857. The initial tanning factory was located in the Menomonee Valley. By the 1880s, Pfister & Vogel was the largest tannery west of the Allegheny Mountains, and by the start of World War I, it was the largest in the world. The company's fortunes – and that of the tanning industry as a whole – declined after the war. It ceased tanning operations in December 1930, but Charles P. Vogel established a successor corporation, the Pfister & Vogel Tanning Co., that same month and began operations at the complex at Water and Pleasant streets in 1931. Military demands for leather during World War II was a boon for the company, but by 1960, the association between the company and Pfister and Vogel family members had come to an end. U.S. Leather acquired the Water Street facility in the 1990s, but losses prompted the plant's closing in February 2000.

Scope and Content: The collection consists of ledgers, journals, financial statements, photos and other ephemera that document the operations of the Pfister & Vogel Company. The bulk of the material concerns the period from 1890 through 1930.
