Abstract: Williamsburg was a small unincorporated community that developed in the mid-19th century, just to the north of Milwaukee's city limits. William Bogk's resort (located in the area that became Pabst Park) was the impetus behind the area's growth. In 1891, the City of Milwaukee annexed the area.

Scope and Content: The collection consists of an article (two copies) on Williamsburg's history, as well as a typescript copy of a March 8, 1891, Milwaukee Sentinel article with a brief description of the community.

Access and Use: No restrictions

Language: English
